

experimental probability

The number of favorable outcomes in an event divided by the total number of completed trials of an experiment.