You’re a Grand Old Flag
by Warren Kimble, Walker, 2007
Against the backdrop of George M. Cohan’s song lyrics and rich panoramic scenes, the United States flag appears on every page for young readers to find.

Signs on the Road
by Mary Hill, Children’s Press, 2003
A young boy and his mother drive to go shopping, observing the various traffic signs on the way.

Words Are Not for Hurting.
by Elizabeth Verdick, Free Spirit Publishing, 2004
This book encourages children to use words that communicate feelings while respecting others.

Chicken Chickens Go to School
by Valeri Gorbachev, North-South, 2003
On the first day of school, a teacher helps two chickens overcome their fears and make friends.

Miss Mingo and the First Day of School
by Jamie Harper, Candlewick Press, 2009
Miss Mingo helps her class of fascinating animals understand that everyone is special.

There’s No Place Like School: Classroom Poems
Children may enjoy hearing poems of your choice from this compilation of the works of multiple poets.

Following Rules
by Robin Nelson, Lerner, 2003
Photos and simple text show children following rules at home and at school. See others in series.

My Best Friend Is as Sharp as a Pencil: And Other Funny Classroom Portraits
by Hanoch Piven, Schwartz & Wade Books, 2010
A young girl gives her impression of people of the school community in this book, complete with collages that incorporate objects found in school.

I, Pledge Allegiance
by Bill Marti, Jr. and Michael Sampson, Candlewick, 2004
Word by word and line by line, this book explicates America’s oath in kid-friendly language.

My Teacher for President
by Kay Winters, Dutton Children’s Books, 2004
Oliver writes to the local news station and gives reasons as to why his teacher should become President of the United States.

O, Say Can You See
by Shelia Keenan, Scholastic, 2007
The meaning behind many American monuments and symbols are explored with bright, detailed illustrations and simple text.

Being Fair: A Book About Fairness
by Mary Small, Picture Window Books, 2006
Children learn about citizenship by thinking about ways to be fair. Other books in the series focus on trustworthiness, responsibility, and respectfulness.

Share and Take Turns (Learning to Get Along)
A girl learns techniques for sharing, and then shows how she practices these skills at home and school.

I Have a Dream, Too!
by Jean Alicia Elster, Judson Press, 2002
Joe Joe learns about Mary McLeod Bethune, who inspires him to hold onto his dream of going to college.

You’re a Grand Old Flag
by Warren Kimble, Walker, 2007
Against the backdrop of George M. Cohan’s song lyrics and rich panoramic scenes, the United States flag appears on every page for young readers to find.

Signs on the Road
by Mary Hill, Children’s Press, 2003
A young boy and his mother drive to go shopping, observing the various traffic signs on the way.

Words Are Not for Hurting.
by Elizabeth Verdick, Free Spirit Publishing, 2004
This book encourages children to use words that communicate feelings while respecting others.

Chicken Chickens Go to School
by Valeri Gorbachev, North-South, 2003
On the first day of school, a teacher helps two chickens overcome their fears and make friends.

Miss Mingo and the First Day of School
by Jamie Harper, Candlewick Press, 2009
Miss Mingo helps her class of fascinating animals understand that everyone is special.

There’s No Place Like School: Classroom Poems
Children may enjoy hearing poems of your choice from this compilation of the works of multiple poets.

Following Rules
by Robin Nelson, Lerner, 2003
Photos and simple text show children following rules at home and at school. See others in series.

My Best Friend Is as Sharp as a Pencil: And Other Funny Classroom Portraits
by Hanoch Piven, Schwartz & Wade Books, 2010
A young girl gives her impression of people of the school community in this book, complete with collages that incorporate objects found in school.

I, Pledge Allegiance
by Bill Marti, Jr. and Michael Sampson, Candlewick, 2004
Word by word and line by line, this book explicates America’s oath in kid-friendly language.

My Teacher for President
by Kay Winters, Dutton Children’s Books, 2004
Oliver writes to the local news station and gives reasons as to why his teacher should become President of the United States.

O, Say Can You See
by Shelia Keenan, Scholastic, 2007
The meaning behind many American monuments and symbols are explored with bright, detailed illustrations and simple text.

Being Fair: A Book About Fairness
by Mary Small, Picture Window Books, 2006
Children learn about citizenship by thinking about ways to be fair. Other books in the series focus on trustworthiness, responsibility, and respectfulness.

Share and Take Turns (Learning to Get Along)
A girl learns techniques for sharing, and then shows how she practices these skills at home and school.

I Have a Dream, Too!
by Jean Alicia Elster, Judson Press, 2002
Joe Joe learns about Mary McLeod Bethune, who inspires him to hold onto his dream of going to college.

You’re a Grand Old Flag
by Warren Kimble, Walker, 2007
Against the backdrop of George M. Cohan’s song lyrics and rich panoramic scenes, the United States flag appears on every page for young readers to find.

Signs on the Road
by Mary Hill, Children’s Press, 2003
A young boy and his mother drive to go shopping, observing the various traffic signs on the way.

Words Are Not for Hurting.
by Elizabeth Verdick, Free Spirit Publishing, 2004
This book encourages children to use words that communicate feelings while respecting others.

Chicken Chickens Go to School
by Valeri Gorbachev, North-South, 2003
On the first day of school, a teacher helps two chickens overcome their fears and make friends.

Miss Mingo and the First Day of School
by Jamie Harper, Candlewick Press, 2009
Miss Mingo helps her class of fascinating animals understand that everyone is special.

There’s No Place Like School: Classroom Poems
Children may enjoy hearing poems of your choice from this compilation of the works of multiple poets.

Following Rules
by Robin Nelson, Lerner, 2003
Photos and simple text show children following rules at home and at school. See others in series.

My Best Friend Is as Sharp as a Pencil: And Other Funny Classroom Portraits
by Hanoch Piven, Schwartz & Wade Books, 2010
A young girl gives her impression of people of the school community in this book, complete with collages that incorporate objects found in school.